Dear students,

It has earlier been announced that all students currently enrolled to our graduate programs (master's or doctorate and with thesis) have to register for ECO606 Research Ethics and Methods.

There has been a new Graduate School Board Decision yesterday, indicating that only those students who are currently in course stage need to take the class. In other words, if you are preparing for the qualifying/proficiency exams (ECO800, EKO800), or if you are already writing your dissertation or thesis (ECO600, ECO700, EKO600, EKO700), you do not need to take this class.

As of today, the only problem is to renew the registration for those of you who have already approved their registration before Friday. We have already removed the approvals in the system (or about to do it momentarily). Please login to the system again, and drop the class if you do not need to take it. Then, you need to approve your classes once again, and print out the new stuff that needs to be approved by your advisor and be returned to department office (to Aykut Attar or Dilek Kilic) before 16:30 this Friday.
